Plate 11 Flotation  A sample of native (naturally occurring) copper. Native copper usually occurs in compact, filiform or dendritic masses, although tetrahedral or octahedral crystals are occasionally found. (With permission from J. C. Revy / Science Photo Library.)