Plate 14 Centrifugation A centrifuge used to separate the various components in the blood. The liquid is placed into a container that is spun at high speed around a central axis; the centrifugal force separates groups of particles with different densities. Blood is separated into red cells, white cells and plasma. (With permission from Chris Priest / Science Photo Library.)